Dear Community Members,

Yes, Christ is risen, Holy Week is over and we can all breathe a bit easier, well, I can anyway. The same goes for Father Orlowski and Deacon Favole. You can ask any priest what he thinks about Holy Week and you'll always get the same answer, "I love Holy Week; it's at the center of our faith; we couldn't really exist without it. But, you know, I'm happy to see it come and happy to see it go." I'm sure you must all know how exhausting Holy Week is. I know how exhausting it can be for parents – remember, I was once a child and member of a family myself. Well, double that and you'll get an approximate idea, particularly if Ténébræ is put in the mix. A propos, Ténébræ was more successful this year. There were more of you in the pews for which I'm very grateful.

Once again let me reiterate my thanks to all of you. I was specific in last week's bulletin, but, even though I'll mention it from the pulpit, there is one group I thank, and thank profoundly. That is the group of parents who have boys who serve at the altar. I know it was a burden, especially for you who travel so far, to bring your boys to rehearsals. I thank you so very much for that. Yes, in a perfect world, rehearsals wouldn't be needed, but, alas, our world is not yet perfect. Nevertheless, Mr. Pyron and I are working on some sort of rehearsal plan which would significantly lighten the Holy Week burden in the future.

In addition, I thank Father Orlowski and Deacon Favole for their hard work last week. Until he returns to Seminary tomorrow, Deacon Favole will have worked on a farm for a week. You may also have noticed that Father Orlowski is absent as well. I drove the both of them to the airport early Monday morning. Father has personal business during Easter Week. This coming Tuesday or Wednesday, he'll also be leaving for almost three weeks to substitute for another FSSP priest. So, once again, I'm alone in the house. Having lived most of my adult life alone, it's nice to be by yourself once in a while. And just in case you're interested, yes, I'll really enjoy being on my own again for a bit.

So, now we are in the Easter Season. This will continue until Ascension Thursday, when, even though it's still considered Easter Time, we will enter the little sub-season of Ascensontide. Easter extends for 50 days. Keeping ourselves from sin, let us rejoice, my children and my friends, for Christ is Risen!
